Writing Task 1

The diagrams have shown the life cycle of salmon. The illustrations have reflected the various consequences of different key stages of salmons.
The life cycle of salmon starts from the upper river where there is only a few slow moving current. It allows the deposition of salmon eggs below the reeds and put them in between the small stones at the bottom of the river bank. At this stage, salmons will spend for about 5-6 months at the upper part of the river streams. After around half year, salmon eggs have hatched and become "fry". Then, they will leave for the lower part of the stream and grow for around 4 years. The original fry is only around 3-8 cm long and will turn into "smolt" which is 12-15 cm long after staying in the fast-flowing river part for 4 years.

During the stage of smolt, they will migrate to the open sea areas and stay for around 5 years. After 5 years, smolt will gradually transit into the next stage of their maturation, the adult salmon. A fully grown salmon can grow to 70-76 cm in length. The adult salmon will then swim back to their place of birth and will start the next life cycle of a new baby salmon. Adult salmons will start laying eggs at their original place of birth and once start again to start the cycle anew.
